

Tyler Los-Jones Bio

Tyler Los-Jones' photographic practice draws on his proximity to Alberta's Rocky Mountains. Through folding and re-photographing touristic images of these local geographies, his work investigates the process in which landscape photography is used to produce and fulfill our expectations of the environment. Los-Jones' work has been exhibited in solo and group exhibitions in the United States, the United Kingdom and throughout Canada. Recently, his work has been exhibited at the 2014 Feature contemporary Art Fair (Toronto), Platform Centre (Winnipeg), and The Banff Centre. He was commissioned to produce a large-scale work titled, A panorama protects it's views for Future Station: the 2015 Alberta Biennial of Contemporary Art at the Art Gallery of Alberta (Edmonton). Los-Jones' work is included in the permanent collections of the Banff Centre, TD Canada Trust and the City of Calgary Civic Collection.
